

"You shall get all you need, but you should not need much."

Olav Gjelsvik

This talk/paper aims to identify how widespread thinking about health priorities may, perhaps surprisingly, imply a problematic form of ageism, by unjustly letting age, primarily indirectly, play too large a role in determining who should be given certain types of treatment. Patients are generally promised that they shall get all they need, but older patients might, on account of this, fail to get all that much (in terms of treatment).

Bibliography/References:

NOU 14:12 'Åpent og rettferdig. Prioriteringer i helsetjenesten'. Norwegian Government Publications, 2014.

Norheim, Ole F. 'Ethical priority setting for universal health coverage: challenges in deciding upon fair distribution of health services', BMC Medicine (2016) 14:75 DOI 10.1186/s12916-016-0624-4

Olav Gjelsvik is a Professor of Philosophy at the University of Oslo since 1994. He received his doctorate in Oxford in 1986. He has been a visiting professor at London School of Economics, University of Oxford, and University of Paris. From 2010 to 2017 he was director of CSMN, a Centre of Excellence at the University of Oslo.